STUDENTS MAKE LONG FLIGHT

Lieuts. Foulois and Humphreys Remain in Air More Than an Hour, When Wind Forces Them to Alight After Nearly Breaking Record. Lahm's Father Witnesses Flights.

Wilbur Wright bade farewell to the pupils of the school of applied aeronautics yesterday and started for New York, where he will met Brother Orville and Miss Katherine Wright.

Before he left, however, Mr. Wright saw two of his pupils come chose to one of the records which Orville holds for "two-man" flight, and departed satisfied that the school is now in such shape that unless something entirely unforeseen happens it will go along smoothly with-

Mr. Wright said before he left that he and his brother will no doubt conduct some experiments in flying this winter, probably at Dayton. Concerning his plans for the formation of a company to manufacture Wright biplanes, he would say nothing; but it is pretty well understood that such plans are in the making.

The flying school opened for business at 8:15 o'clock yesterday morning, when Lieuts. Foulois and Humphreys went up for their near record-breaking flight. At the start the wind was practically a minus quantity, but before the officers decided to come down it had risen to fifteen miles an hour. Lieut. Foulois operated the controls for fifty minutes of the trip, which lasted one hour one and three-fourth minutes, and his brother-pupil was on the bridge for the remainder hour one and three-fourth minute mark was within ten minutes of the record made, he said, by Orville, with Lieut afterward he discovered that Orville had stayed up in Europe for one hour and wenty minutes with a passenger. The lme yesterday, however, beat the Col-Park two-passenger record by cord by about three minutes. Lieut. Humphreys only came down after both said so by waving his disapproval. The second flight of the day began at self an aeronautic enthusiast, for the nachine, something he hasn't done be-

The last flight began at 5:12:30 o'clock and lasted seventeen and a half minutes.

The aeronautic critics were surprised to learn yesterday that Lieut. Lahm has been ordered to report to his regiment, the Sixth Cavalry, about the first of December. His place at College Park will be taken by Lieut. Walter C. Jones, of the Thirteenth Infantry. Lieut. Lahm, according to the critics, has shown his

Mr. Knox then rose to his feet, and, holding his wine glass in the air, proposed a health to "His Majesty, the Emperor of Japan," saying it was especially appropriate on this, the anniversary of his birthday, and in the presence of such a distinguished company of Japanese. With the sudden straightening of the back with which the Japanese invariably greet the name of their ruler, they all shouted out "Banzali Banzali" and much of the air that went into the cry came with plenty of anthusiasm from American lungs.

Knox's address was heartlly applauded by the Americans and those of the Japanese who could understand English. The rest of the Japanese added their tribute to the premier of the Cabinet when the address was repeated in their own tongue. All the addresses were thus translated from one tongue into the other.

Mr. Matsul explained in a short address that it was not usually the custom in this country to celebrate the anniversary of the birthday of the Emperor, but that, with the commercial commission in this city on the anniversary, the occasion was too propositious to be allowed to Those present were:
